Background

When Hurricane Irma made landfall, stakeholders in the Immokalee community quickly rallied to manage the overall response to the unmet needs in the area.

For many, the needs were unimaginable.

While some simply lost power, others lost all their belongings including the roof over their heads and the bed they fall asleep in at night.

After the immediate efforts were well underway to provide essential services like meal preparation and housing, local organizations and community members gathered to quickly establish a coalition to better prepare Immokalee for future disasters while working to mitigate the devastation felt with Hurricane Irma.

Over the following weeks, the group came together and with the help and guidance of organizations like FEMA, the group formed the Immokalee Unmet Needs Coalition. Their purpose is to identify needs within the community and take a hands-on approach to solving those needs by utilizing the resources and local organizations have to offer.
